

A slow deterioration has occurred with violence on TV. We've become accustomed as adults to violence and we don't consider the impact on children. I don't see how your organization considers it has done anything to curb violence. A large majority of children stay up later because both parents work and aren't home to provide school work mentoring, meals, or have enough time to ask them how their day went. Because of the hectic schedules TVs become temporary babysitters. Please quit asking for comments and do something. Thank you.